

Figure: As-
Is Rich Picture

EXPLANATION: The current manual system for post-harvest loss management involves various stakeholders operating in silos, with limited data sharing and coordinated action. Farmers, storage facility managers, transporters, wholesalers, and retailers each record losses in their own way, often using paper-based methods. Agricultural extension officers receive sporadic, often delayed reports, making it difficult to provide timely and targeted interventions.